College Park Will See
Busy Aviation Season

College Park is again the center of the army's aeronautical activities. The officers and men who spent the winter in aviation work in Augusta, Ga., reached the army aviation field at College Park yesterday afternoon and at once began to determine as to their summer camp will be prepared possibly to-day, almost certainly to-morrow, for a continuation of their practices. The five officers—Capt. Paul Beck, Capt. Charles Le Forest Chandler, Lieut. Roy C. Kirkland, Lieut. Leighton W. Haskins, Jr., and Lieut. Harry Graham—and the score or more of men who made up the party were in splendid condition, and they reported that their equipment needed only assembling to make it ready for use.

The officers will reside in Washington during the summer, but the camp will be maintained at College Park as usual. Lieut. Thomas De Witt Milling, who remained in Washington this winter, and will now resume active duty with the other army aviators, said last night that the program of work for the summer included continued experiments in wireless telegraphy, photography, and sketching. Experiments in bomb-dropping, Lieut. Milling said, will not be a prominent feature of the program, though that practice of aviation as a branch of the military arm's activities will be kept up to the standard maintained by other nations. It is expected, however, that the experiments in bomb-dropping conducted this summer will be far in advance of those yet attempted.

Lieut. Henry H. Arnold, who will join the aviation camp later, is now in Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he is taking an examination for promotion to first lieutenant. Lieut. Frank Kennedy is recovering from injuries sustained in a recent fall, and will come to Washington later.

Col. C. B. Winter, of the Ohio National Guard, will be a pupil at the camp at College Park some time this spring or summer.

Five new aeroplanes are to be delivered to the army between May 1 and August 1. Four of them are being manufactured by the Wrights, and one by the Burgess factory.

Society

The President and Mrs. Taft dined with Mr. Justice and Mrs. Lamar last evening. Miss Taft did not dine out or have guests at the White House. Master Charles Taft has returned to his studies at school in Connecticut after a spring vacation of a fortnight. Mr. Robert Taft will probably arrive to-morrow for his spring vacation from the Harvard Law School.

Society responded very handsomely yesterday afternoon to the opportunity of hearing the former United States Minister H. H. D. Felice to Norway, who was in fact the first Minister from this country to that after the separation of Norway and Sweden, in his interesting lecture on "Scandinavian Life in Russia," with illustrations. The playhouse was well filled and the audience was a distinguished one. Mr. Felice's lecture was beautifully illustrated and was of very particular interest, not alone to diplomats and their circle, but to all Americans. Among those in the audience were Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mrs. John Hay, Mrs. Stanley Matthews, Mrs. Laurence Townsend, Mrs. William C. Draper, Mrs. Draper, Mrs. H. H. D. Felice, Mrs. W. J. Symonds, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Brownson, Mrs. Rockwood Hoar, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Chastard, Mrs. McCawley, Mrs. Edward McCawley, Mr. S. P. Elmore, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Glover, Mr. and Mrs. A. Gordon Cumming, Rear Admiral and Mrs. C. H. Davis, and Mrs. Selfridge.

Baron Frobenius, the new attaché of the Austro-Hungarian Embassy, will go to New York to-morrow for an Easter visit.

Mrs. Fisher, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, will not be at home to-day.

The Association for Works of Mercy are trying what, for charity, is a novel scheme. They ask no one to buy tickets, they sell no programmes or other extras, and ask only the regular New York prices for the two performances they will give on Easter Monday and Tuesday afternoons at 4 o'clock. They trust to the reputation of the kinemacolor pictures of the duhar to sell out the house for them, and from the reception of the Indian princes, the polo tournament, the decorated elephants, the grand review, and the state garden party. The lecturer will explain "What's What," and $4.00 feet of pictures will be shown. The pictures, the polo tournament, the decorated elephants, the grand review, and the state garden party. Additional box holders for the show are Mrs. E. H. G. Slater, Mrs. Cleveland Perkins, Admiral Brownson, and Mrs. Charles Boughton Wood.

Mrs. Mann will give a large children's party on Monday. Mrs. C. H. Butler will have as her guest Mrs. Bryan, to whom the pictures will be of special interest.

Mrs. George M. Dunn, wife of the American military attaché at the embassy at Rome, entertained a small company at luncheon yesterday at the Chevy Chase Club, followed by bridge, in honor of Mrs. Kummer, of Buffalo, a house guest of Mr. and Mrs. William H. H. Ridgely.

Capt. Albert Gleaves, commandant of the Narragansett Bay naval station, will relieve Rear Admiral Eugene H. C. Lutz as commandant of the New York navy yard the first week in May. Capt. William H. Caperton succeeded Capt. Gleaves at Newport.

Miss Callie Hoke Smith, younger daughter of Senator and Mrs. Hoke Smith, is in Atlanta, Ga., the guest of Miss Jane Cooper for the Easter holidays. She will be the guest of honor at a number of social functions which are being planned during her stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Christian have sent out invitations for the wedding of their daughter Gwynette and Mr. Claude Edward Willis. The ceremony will take place Wednesday afternoon, April 24, at Calvary Baptist Church, followed by an informal reception for the relatives and close friends at the home of the bride's parents, 22 V street northwest.

Good, of Iowa, and her sisters, Mrs. Fletcher and Miss Deacon, of Chicago, who are Mrs. Good's house guests for the Easter holidays. The house was adorned for the occasion with decorations suggestive of Easter. MOTHER HOPES
FOR LOST SON

Although the sturdy and fearless life-savers of the bleak and barren shores of the Great South Bay, Long Island, have ceased their searching, and the patient and untiring dredgers have turned from their task disheartened, and the seamen along the coast have utterly given up hope, there still lingers with Mrs. Frederick W. Clemens, of the Alhambra, Seventeenth and T streets northwest, a strange feeling that the members of the little party of three, containing her son, Dr. Carl Clemens, of New York, who set out on a hunting trip in a launch on the afternoon of January 5, and were never seen again, are still living and may yet be found.

Ever since the little party disappeared in the fearful storm which swept the Great South Bay on the night of January 5, Mrs. Clemens has been comforted by a ray of hope that the son whom she loved had not passed out into the sea to death. Every effort has been made to locate the members of the party and the little story in which they battled the wintry tempest on the rough sea, but nothing of encouragement has resulted. Not a sign of the party of three has been discovered; not a trace of the little craft or its contents has been found.

No Sign of Party.

The Great South Bay has been dredged, but no sign of the ill-fated party has been discovered. Government life-savers have traveled up and down the bleak coast and along the shifting sand dunes with the hope of finding some piece of board, the wreck of clothing, or some fragment which would tell mutely the story of the ill-fated three. But the life-savers have found nothing. Vessels have cruised and recruised the bay; islands have been carefully examined, and the story of the hunting party still remains a tragic mystery. The dredgers have returned from the scouring of the deep. The life-savers have ceased to look for the lost. The waves of the sea went out from Bayshore, Long Island, that Friday afternoon, never to be heard of again, have left the seashore where they lingered long weeks with the hope of seeing the lost brought back from the sea, to return to the roar and bustle of the mighty city.

Mrs. Clemens, the mother of one of the party, has been to the bay side, and she has returned. But with her there is still hope.

"I cannot give up hope utterly," said Mrs. Clemens last night. "When I was in New York they told me that there was one chance in a million. 'Yes,' I said, 'but that chance is God's. I'll share it with Him.' There is a feeling within me that they must be alive. I cannot give up the last chance. They may have been picked up during the storm by a foreign-bound vessel. It is strange that no trace was found of them. They were certainly swept out to sea. But even so, something within me keeps me from releasing all hope."

Three in Motor Launch.

The party was composed of Dr. Clemens, of New York City; Edwin Bailey, also of New York, and Capt. Tom Veitman, who was piloting the hunters to a houseboat anchored at an island in the bay, where the New Yorkers expected to spend the week-end hunting. The party of three left Bay Shore Friday afternoon, January 5, in a motor launch. Nothing more was seen of them. That night a fierce storm swept the bay. Saturday morning an unmanned boat was seen far out in the bay floundering about on the waves. Sunday the launch was still missing about. Monday morning it was tossed into an inlet, where it was discovered to be the power launch of the party of three.

The launch which was trailing behind the launch when it left Bay Shore was missing. It has not been seen since. From the condition of the launch it was obvious that the craft had been abandoned at the island. It is believed that the three men went aboard the dory and were swept by it far out into the sea.

The life-savers at the Fire Island station made no attempt to search for the lost party until the matter was called to their attention by relatives of the hunting party, notwithstanding the fact that the launch was sighted by the government employees the day following the tragic Friday. As a result of the alleged remissness an investigation of the matter is now being held at Fire Island.

Lieut. William E. Atter, of the United States Revenue Cutter Service, is in charge of the investigation.

Mrs. Clemens refused last night to criticize the Fire Island life-savers, although she was forced to admit that they were remiss. On the other hand, she had warm words of praise for the men of the Point of Woods station who aided in the search for the party from the beginning of the tragic chapter.

Dr. Clemens was well known in Washington and New York.

NORWOOD IS GOING WEST.

Well-known Newspaper Man to Leave for Iowa.

Irving C. Norwood, one of the best known newspaper men in Washington, will leave Saturday for Davenport, Iowa, where he will become secretary of the greater Davenport committee, which is "booming" Davenport.

Mr. Norwood is a native of Washington and received his newspaper training here and in New York. Since 1904 he has been connected with the Washington Star and with several publicity campaigns, including the work of the inaugural committee at the inauguration of President Roosevelt in 1908, and of President Taft in 1909. Besides his work in the press galleries of the Capitol he has been a frequent contributor to the magazines.

President Taft, Speaker Clark, Minority Leader Mann, and many other Congressmen wrote notes to Mr. Norwood, expressing their admiration of his work in Washington and their regret at his departure. In Davenport, Mr. Norwood will succeed Woodworth Clum, formerly a Washington newspaper man, who recently resigned as secretary of the greater Davenport committee to become treasurer of the Davenport locomotive works.
